Are your feet as dirty as ours?

You see, we've just been testing our garden soil, as the ol'timers say you shouldn't plant your tomatoes until you can walk comfortably through the garden soil, barefoot.

As the great heroic tomato grower Winston Churchill once said, "Now is the time."*

Once again, as in former days of yore, we have once more pondered, prepared and propagated over ninety (count 'em) of the best varieties from a long line of lovely, love apples.*

So please, won't you join us for the Second Annual Atlock Farm Heirloom Tomato Plant Sale Bonanza while supplies last?

This is a once in a lifetime opportunity for you to join the great tomato growers of the past — Mae West, Jane Russell or Kate Smith.

How about them tomatoes? Do you doubt us? Look it up!

Sincerely,
Ken Selody and his love apples*

Don't forget, join us for Tastamonium, our tomato tasting and contest, Saturday, August 21, 2010 11a.m. - 4p.m.
