Featuring 98.6 Varieties for an Intimate Legitimate Love Apple Love-in!

On Saturday, August 21, from 11a.m. - 4p.m. rain or shine, Ken Selody, horticulturist, nursery owner, and registered tomato fetishist of Atlock Farm, will host his annual Tastamonium, to promote the heritage strains and their cultural diversity.

Open to the public, he invites all heirloom tomato lovers and growers, to bring examples of their best harvest to be judged and awarded. Click here for contest rules.

Mr. Selody's collection of heirlooms numbers over 98 varieties, as opposed to last year; a paltry 63.

Awards to the competitors will be given in the categories of Biggest, Smallest and Highly Amusing, with honorable mentions and deep bows for Most Pleated, Conjoined, Comely and Unbecoming.

Will it be The Blaby, The Black Seaman, Banana Legs, Mortgage Lifter, Radiator Charlie, The Jersey Devil, or Mr. Selody's personal favorite, The Furry Yellow Hog?

Come lock your lips and overstimulate your lingual papilla on our luscious lycopine.

Guests will also be able to sample a myriad of multitudinous tomatoes from the 551 tomato plants grown at Atlock Farm.

Atlock Farm, located in Somerset, New Jersey, is the eminent garden nursery, recognized by The New York Times for the "rare and remarkable" in topiaries, perennials and tropicals.

Mr. Selody is a contributing editor of Martha Stewart Living, and a regular guest on the show.

Tomatoes will be available for purchase. Can't wait to see you.

Sincerely,
Ken Selody and his Love Apples
